Reasons for Allowance

Applicants' Amendment C has overcome the prior art of record. This is because Applicants' independent claims now recite a limitation for:

“a message is received at the mobile switching center interface for either the wireless device or the landline communication device, a message waiting indication is transmitted to both the wireless device and the landline communication device”

The prior art of record only teaches sending notification messages (message waiting indications) to a single location or to alternate destinations if a first destination is not “on”. This is different from Applicants' invention because notification is sent to only a single destination. New search updates revealed some prior art which ring more than one telephones upon receipt of an incoming call. This is different from Applicants' invention which requires notification upon receipt of a message and not a call. Some other prior art teach sending notifications to either a landline device alone or a wireless device alone. This, too, is different from Applicants' invention which requires notifications to be sent to both a wireless device and a landline device. There is also no suggestion or motivation for combining the prior art of record to achieve Applicants' invention. Therefore, Applicants' claims 18-33 are indicated allowable.
